

IT IS FOR LADIES, TOO.

They Can Stop Their Hair Falling Out With Herpicide.

Ladies who have thin hair and whose hair is falling out, can prevent the hair falling out, and thicken the growth, with Newbro's "Herpicide." Besides, Herpicide is one of the most agreeable hair dressings there is. Herpicide kills the dandruff germ that eats the hair off at the root. After the germ is destroyed, the root will shoot up, and the hair grow long as ever. Even a sample will convince any lady that Newbro's Herpicide is an indispensable toilet requisite. It contains no oil or grease, it will not stain or dye. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

The Happiness of Effort.

The happiest persons in the world are those who have to plan and work to make cherished dreams come true. The easy gratification of wishes does not bring the keen enjoyment which accompanies struggles to sweep away obstacles. The best summer one woman ever had was the one in which her husband bought a little cottage on the easy-payment plan and she learned how hard "easy" payments really were. They had other financial burdens to carry, the necessary ones caused by illness, and were never certain that the payments on their little house and bit of land could be met. But they struggled on with cheerfulness and hope and had a fine time while doing it.

For five years they have been so prosperous that any reasonable wish could be granted with promptness. But the keen pleasure of their poorer years is lacking. They are now objects of envy to a close neighbor who is doing her best to imitate the family on an income of little more than half of what that family can afford to spend.

Left His Eyes Behind.

"Carefully hide eyes on dressing table. Destroy all evidence. Burn this message." When this telegram was received at the Turin post-office foul play was suspected, and detectives at once set to work to solve the mystery. Their investigations showed that the sender of the telegram was a man who had lost an eye, which had been replaced by an artificial one. He is engaged to be married, and so far has succeeded in hiding his infirmity from his future bride. A few days ago he stayed at the house of his prospective mother-in-law, and left two reserve glass eyes lying on the dressing table. He remembered the eyes after leaving, and also the fact that his fiancée intended to visit her brother shortly.

Just a Suggestion.

"I hear," said Mrs. Nordore, "that that stubborn candidate for president of your club has finally been induced to withdraw in the interest of harmony." "Yes," replied Mrs. Peppery; "by the way, it's a wonder you couldn't induce your daughter to withdraw from the piano occasionally for the same reason."

By Our Formula

We produce in Hood's Sarsaparilla a medicine that has an unparalleled record of cures of Scrofula, eczema, eruptions, catarrh, rheumatism, anemia, nervousness, that tired feeling, loss of appetite, etc. The combination and proportions of the more than twenty different remedial agents contained in Hood's Sarsaparilla are known only to ourselves, so there can be no substitute. This medicine makes healthy and strong the "Little Soldiers" in your blood, those corpuscles that fight the disease germs constantly attacking you.

A FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

Dean Robert's Cause for Unsatisfactory Results in Agriculture—How Others Have Diagnosed the Situation—Staple Farm Crops Sold at a Loss—How the Price of Milk is Pushed Up—A Year's Accounting and the Action it Prompted.

(Written specially for The Bulletin.)

It is doubtful if there is today in the United States a higher authority on general farming than Dean Robert of Cornell University. New York. For thirty years he has been the College of Agriculture in that great university; he is the author of numerous widely used text books on agriculture; he is reckoned the foremost authority on matters connected with land fertility; he has only recently retired from active work by reason of age, and was made "professor emeritus" when he retired, in simple appreciation of his work and the rank it holds. The judgment of such a man, of such training and experience and such primacy in the world of agricultural education is worth a good deal on any farming subject he feels himself competent to pronounce upon.

In a short paper contributed to a recent number of The Outlook, Dean Robert condenses some solid sense and some truth about the difficulties of rural living that I have seen in all the voluminous literature called forth by or for the Commission on Country Life. He strikes at the root of the matter in just three words, stating in those three "the one cause which more than all others produces the conditions complained of. That cause is lack of profits." The emphasis is his, not mine.

When I read that, I wanted to take the first train for Ithaca, N. Y., just to shake hands with the man who could see through the hole in the millstone. I didn't go, for the very reason he mentions, "lack of profits," from which to pay railroad fares and the wages of a man to do my work while I was gone. But, if there's anything in "telepathy" and "thought transference," Dean Robert knew, that day, that one lonely and cranky hayseed was just pumping congratulations at him across the intervening latitude.

If you followed the doings before that Country Life Commission, you'll remember it was called upon to find out how many roads there are to farming troubles as there are drugs catalogued in the pharmacopoeia for the cure of all human ailments. One man thought good roads would solve the problem; another wanted better rural schools; a third called for universal co-operation; a fourth thought the whole difficulty lay in lack of social advantages; a fifth wanted government railroads and traction companies; a sixth demanded the repeal of the homestead act, and the stoppage of western farm settlement. And so on, and on, ad infinitum, ad nauseam. Now, there was some reason in every one of these diagnoses; each critic had a real grievance behind him. But they were all one-sided and one-eyed. Each saw just one phase and magnified it into the whole thing. His vision showed him symptoms, but not the real disease. His nostrum was addressed to the alleviation of symptoms not to the cure of the cause of these symptoms. Doctor Robert, on the other hand, has pointed his finger straight to the center and source of the internal disease which manifests itself in differing external symptoms. The cause of this disease would instantly abolish and destroy the whole distressing brood of boils and blains and blotches on the surface. "Lack of profits," that tells the whole thing in words anyone can understand.

Let me quote a few lines from this lucid and enlightening article: "A large number of farmers—I believe a majority of them—are not satisfied for the last twenty-five years have been selling many of the staple crops at a real loss. By this I mean that if the farmer's time is charged up, to his wheat field, for the wages of common laborers, and if there be added the other items in the cost of production, teams, the hired men and their board, threshing bills, seed and fertilizer, the selling price of the crop will not balance the account. Astonishing as the statement is, it is a fact that many hay and grain farmers are working for fifty cents or less a day and boarding themselves. "For the last twenty-five years wheat has sold on an average, on the farm, at scarcely more than a cent a pound. At the present yield the farmer must receive at least two cents if he makes wheat, and two and a half cents if he receives a fair profit." Dean Robert adds, with sarcasm which ought to bite somebody, somewhere: "We boast of our mammoth grain crops and cheap bread, and then wonder, 'What's the matter with the farmer?' and the man who buys his bread at less than cost answers, enthusiastically, 'He's all right.'"

The average gross income of the wheat raiser in the last census year, 1900, was seven dollars and two and a half cents per acre. The rent of land, interest on capital, seed and labor come to three dollars. What does the farmer get for himself? Bear in mind, too, that, since this was the average, there must have been many who got even less. Nice outlook for those of us under the average, isn't it? Says Dean Robert: "The baker has just arrived, and I am wondering how of the happy homes of to-day is a vast fund of information as to the best methods of promoting health and happiness and right living and knowledge of the world's best products.

Products of actual excellence and reasonable claims truthfully presented and which have attained to world-wide acceptance through the approval of the Well-Informed of the World; not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting and obtaining the best the world affords.

One of the products of that class, of known component parts, an Ethical remedy, approved by physicians and commended by the Well-Informed of the World as a valuable and wholesome family laxative is the well-known Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

THERE is no advertising medium in Eastern Connecticut equal to The Bulletin for business results.

much of my five-cent loaf of bread, which weighs twelve ounces, the farmer gets. When it comes back from the laboratory where it has been sent to determine its moisture content, it will weigh, however, a full quart. I will show you that he gets less than one cent out of my five."

There you have the truth in all its shrewdness and the man who produces and supplies all the real value there is in the loaf of bread gets less than one-fifth of its price! If all the prosecuting attorneys of the courts should combine their ability and experience, they couldn't frame so damning an indictment as that mere statement of fact.

Nor is wheat the exception. The other day I saw in tabular form a statement of where the money went for the milk which is sold in New York city at ten cents a quart. Of that money, something went to pay the dealer's profits, something went for transportation, something went for "administration" (Heaven bless us, "administration" sell a quart of milk) and something went in several other ways. The farmer got just two cents and a half. Two cents and a half for the milk in the pail and seven cents and a half to the man who carries it to you. Do you wonder why the farmer doesn't have planes and automobiles? Or why some other people do have them?

One of the best dairymen in a good dairy section of New York wrote recently to his farm paper that, after doing business for more than thirty years with an all-the-year-round herd of about thirty cows he was "very, very much surprised to be above ground." He had greatly increased the fertility of his farm, "but as to the happiness and comfort of those conducting the business I cannot say that I would care to repeat the experience." The dairyman went on to say that the price of dairy products is not a few men in the west fix the price of feed; the milk exchange fixes the price of butter, etc. The dairyman hasn't a word to say about it. Another dairyman who kept careful record of his herd from October to April reports that he got just $18.80 per cow during that time and paid out for grain alone, $18.04 and for hay and straw, for labor and interest and wages, for six months. Is it any wonder he doesn't paint his barn and curry off his cows twice a day?

Some years ago I kept daily accounts with all my farm crops for a full year. I charged against each crop the rent of land at five per cent of its value, the cost of fertilizer and seed and labor, and its pro rata share of the burden of taxes and insurance on the farm must, somehow, pay. Then I credited each crop with the actual market value of the gross product. That is, if I sold half my hundred bushels of corn, I credited the crop with the other half which I fed out at the same price, and also with the value of stalks used for fodder, at the current rate for such roughage. The result of the little excursion into book-keeping was very illuminating. I haven't the record at hand, but I remember that some crops I was raising didn't return me as much as I spent on them. One crop—just one—paid for itself in just fifteen cents a bushel for my labor, including the use of two-horse team and tools, some crops paid expenses and gave me wages of from fifty cents to a dollar a day, a few made me gardeners, but only one paid their way, but gave me wages of $2 a day and left something over for profit. That's just the reason I stopped general farming and went into market gardening. I'll be blent if I'm going to work for somebody else for nothing—and pay for the privilege of doing it!

If I find that any certain crop now fails to return me its cost, we will fair wages and something for profit, I simply drop it. I keep a rough but sufficient record in my salesbook to enable me to know at the end of the season what crops, if any, have failed to pay. If the reason for the failure is not in seasonal and chance conditions, but lies in the refusal of my market to pay me profitable prices, then I supply no more of that kind of thing to that particular market, but substitute something which the market will pay for. People have got to eat. Those who are not producers have got to buy what they eat. If they won't pay me for my crops, I'll sell them something which costs me two cents a pound to raise. I'll stop raising wheat for them till they get good and ready to pay for it. On the other hand, they are eager to pay me a good price and fair wages and a reasonable profit on asparagus and green peas. I'll raise asparagus and green peas for 'em—all they'll take. When they get enough of that, they'll pay for them. If they won't, then I'll drop the peas and the asparagus and give 'em carrots and turnips, if those be the edibles they hanker after. I'll raise, not necessarily what they want, but what they want badly enough to pay for.

THE FARMER.

In the First Class. Waterbury is in the same class with Brooklyn. I saw a new auto with chemical fire engine. The fire department arrived on Monday. So far as we are able to learn these machines were given to the city by the city of Brooklyn. It is a long journey from the old hand engine to the modern chemical. But the fire destruction everywhere continues in spite of the best apparatus yet devised. Evidently it is necessary to build so as to have suitable apparatus to extinguish it when it does occur. Some timely remarks regarding the national cash heap are given on another page.—Bristol Press.

To be raised by tax 125,982.47

To meet the expenditures called for by their estimates, a tax of 10 mills on the last City list will be required, said list being $12,558,547. In addition to the above estimated expenses for ordinary purposes of the government, the Committee on Finance requests that the City Council, in its next annual meeting, be authorized to appropriate from the City treasury such an amount not exceeding $20,000 as may be necessary to pay the expenses for erecting a new dam and appendances at Meadow Brook and the same being no longer required for the purposes of conservation of the water supply, but the resolution adopted at said meeting did not provide the method of raising the sums necessary for such expenditure.

Your Committee recommend that inasmuch as the appropriation is made for a permanent improvement and addition to the water supply, the expense thereof should not be included in the ordinary expenses of the current year, and your Committee recommend that the same be included in the next annual City Meeting shall include a proposition authorizing the borrowing of such funds for the purpose of the City of Norwich, the same being no longer required for the purposes of the fire department, and that the same be liquidated from the City treasury in the next annual City Meeting.

Under an act of the General Assembly approved June 13, 1937, the County Commissioners, the Mayor of the City and the Selectmen of the Town of Norwich were constituted a Board for the erection of the addition to the Court House in Norwich, Conn., and were authorized to borrow such sum as might be necessary for the erection of such addition to the Court House, and were authorized to execute notes for the same, which notes shall be binding and obligatory upon the County of New London, the Town of Norwich and the City of Norwich.

Pursuant to law, such Board has executed its note for the sum of $50,000 expended in the erection of such addition, and it is desirable that the joint obligation so created should be released by separate obligation, to provide for the installation of a steam fire engine and chemical engine for the protection of the City of Norwich, in accordance with the recommendations of the Committee on Fire Department. Your Committee further recommend the adoption by the Court of Common Council of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the report and estimates of the Committee on Finance be accepted and approved; that the Clerk cause the same to be published as required by the amended charter, and that the Mayor, or in his absence the Senior Alderman present, be directed to see that the City of Norwich is provided with the fire engine and chemical engine for the protection of the City of Norwich, in accordance with the recommendations of the Committee on Fire Department. Your Committee further recommend the adoption by the Court of Common Council of the following resolution:
